H1

Senior technical GTM advice, without turning it into a full buildout.

Hero body

Sometimes you do not need a full Production Ready engagement.

You need someone who can look at the product, the market, the buyer, the demo, the partner strategy, or the executive story and help you see where the message is breaking.

Advisory Work gives technical startups access to Bob's judgment across technical go to market strategy, product messaging, demo flow, partner enablement, executive narrative, sales enablement, and field conversations.

It is for companies that need senior help thinking through the problem, not a content factory or a full GTM system build.

Advisory subscriptions start with a 3-month minimum because useful advice requires real context, not drive-by opinions.

Section 1: When Advisory Work makes sense

Section headline

When you need a sharper outside view, but not the whole Production Ready path.

Body copy

Advisory Work is usually the right fit when the company has specific questions, decisions, or pressure points that would benefit from senior technical GTM judgment.

That might mean:

- You are preparing for a product launch and want to pressure-test the story.
- Your demo is accurate, but you are not sure it is helping buyers care.
- Your partners are interested, but not yet confident enough to repeat the message.

- Your sales team is hearing objections that product and marketing are not fully seeing.
- Your founder or executive team needs help translating technical depth into a story the market can follow.
- You are planning an event, webinar, analyst conversation, board discussion, or strategic customer meeting.
- You are not sure whether you need Production Ready, a smaller sprint, or just focused advisory support.

The work is practical. We look at what is happening, where the story or strategy is breaking, and what would make the next step more useful.

Section 2: What Advisory Work can cover

Section headline

The topics are flexible. The role is focused.

Body copy

Advisory Work can support a wide range of technical GTM and company-building conversations, including:

- Technical GTM advisory
- Messaging and positioning review
- Demo review and coaching
- Partner and channel strategy
- Executive narrative coaching
- Event and webinar preparation
- Product launch messaging
- Sales enablement review
- Founder coaching
- Fractional Field CTO-style guidance
- Advisory board participation
- One-off strategic working sessions when appropriate

The common thread is not the topic. It is the type of help.

This is review, strategy, coaching, pressure-testing, and brainstorming from someone who has worked across the technical, field, partner, product marketing, and executive sides of the problem.

Section 3: What Advisory Work is not

Section headline

Advisory is not Production Ready-lite.

Body copy

Advisory Work is not a content creation package, and it is not the place where we build the full GTM system, roadmap, messaging matrix, partner framework, and enablement structure from the ground up.

That work belongs in Production Ready.

Advisory is for companies that need help thinking, deciding, reviewing, improving, or preparing. It can absolutely create clarity and momentum, but it is not meant to replace your internal team, agency, product marketing function, sales leadership, or content production resources.

Advisory does not include:

- Full content creation
- Unlimited deck writing
- Blog writing or social campaigns
- Full messaging framework buildout
- Full GTM roadmap creation
- Full LMS or partner certification production
- SDR work
- Sales quota ownership
- Paid ads or demand generation execution

The goal is to give you better judgment at the moments where better judgment matters.

Section 4: Why limited advisory capacity matters

Section headline

Good advice takes attention.

Body copy

I only take on a small number of advisory clients at a time.

That is partly for my sanity, but mostly because this kind of advice is only useful when I am close enough to understand the company.

To give useful guidance, I need to learn the product, the buyer, the market, the current story, the team, the pressure points, and where the company is trying to go. Otherwise, I am just reacting from the outside, and you do not need to pay premium advisory rates for generic reactions.

Limited capacity is good for both of us.

It means I can give the work the attention it deserves. It also means advisory clients are not buying a slot in an overloaded calendar. They are buying focused access to someone who is actually trying to understand the company well enough to help.

Advisory subscriptions start with a 3-month minimum for the same reason. The first useful advice may happen quickly, but the better advice comes after I understand the company well enough to see the patterns, tensions, and tradeoffs that are not obvious in one call.

Section 5: Advisory options

Section headline

Choose the level of access that matches the need.

Intro copy

Advisory work is structured around recurring access, asynchronous support, and enough continuity to make the advice useful.

Option 1: Monthly Advisory

Headline

Monthly Advisory

Price

$5k/month

Structure

Monthly standing call plus asynchronous email support.

Copy

Monthly Advisory is for companies that want senior technical GTM guidance without a heavy weekly cadence.

It works well when you need a trusted outside perspective on messaging, demos, partner strategy, product launch decisions, executive narrative, field conversations, or specific GTM questions as they come up.

This is the lighter advisory path, but it still requires context. The goal is to give you useful guidance over time, not disconnected comments that sound smart and die in a notebook.

Best fit

Companies that want ongoing access to Bob's judgment, but do not need weekly working sessions.

Commercial note

3-month minimum. Full annual prepay is available at $50k, reflecting a 2-month discount.

Option 2: Weekly Advisory

Headline

Weekly Advisory

Price

$20k/month

Structure

Weekly standing call plus asynchronous email support.

Copy

Weekly Advisory is for companies that need closer support, faster iteration, and more frequent access.

This can be useful when the company is preparing for a launch, major event, partner push, enterprise sales motion, executive narrative shift, or other GTM moment where the story and strategy need sharper attention.

Weekly Advisory gives us enough cadence to keep momentum, work through decisions quickly, and stay closer to the places where the story is being tested in the market.

Best fit

Companies that need regular senior input across technical GTM, messaging, demos, partners, executive narrative, field readiness, or founder-level GTM decisions.

Commercial note

3-month minimum. Full annual prepay is available at $200k, reflecting a 2-month discount.

Option 3: Advisory Board Support

Headline

Advisory Board Support

Price

Negotiated

Structure

Based on expected involvement, company stage, scope, and cash/equity mix.

Copy

Advisory board support is for companies that want longer-term strategic involvement from Bob as a formal or informal advisor.

This may make sense when the company wants ongoing perspective around technical GTM, market narrative, partner strategy, executive messaging, product-to-value translation, or field readiness, but does not need the cadence of a monthly or weekly advisory subscription.

The structure depends on the company, the level of involvement, and whether the relationship is cash-based, equity-based, or a mix of both.

Best fit

Founders, executives, or boards that want Bob involved as a trusted strategic advisor over time.

Section 6: How Advisory differs from Production Ready

Section headline

Advisory helps you think through the work. Production Ready builds the system.

Body copy

Advisory Work and Production Ready solve related problems, but they are not the same offer.

Advisory is best when you need ongoing guidance, review, coaching, or decision support.

Production Ready is best when you need the actual technical GTM system built: the gap map, messaging matrix, demo architecture, executive narrative, partner strategy, readiness roadmap, training, and transfer plan.

A simple way to think about it:

- If you need senior help making better decisions, consider Advisory.

- If you need the GTM system built and transferred, consider Production Ready.
- If you are not sure, schedule a fit call and we can talk through it.

The right answer is not always the bigger engagement. The right answer is the one that fits the problem.

Section 7: Who Advisory is for

Section headline

Advisory is for companies that want senior help, not generic advice.

Body copy

Advisory may be a fit if:

- You have a technical product and need help explaining it in a way buyers care about.
- You want to pressure-test your messaging before a launch, event, investor conversation, or strategic sales push.
- Your founder, sales, product, marketing, and partner teams are not telling the same story.
- You need a technical GTM advisor who can understand the product without losing the business context.
- You want someone who can ask hard questions without turning every conversation into consultant theater.
- You need help thinking through partner strategy, demos, executive narrative, field enablement, or buyer value.
- You want an advisor who cares about helping the team get better, not creating dependency.

Advisory is probably not the right fit if you mainly need high-volume content, campaign execution, paid media, SDR work, or a full GTM system built from scratch.

Section 8: FAQ

Section headline

Advisory Work questions

FAQ 1

Question

What does a go to market consultant do?

Answer

A go to market consultant helps a company figure out how to bring a product to market, explain its value, reach the right buyers, and improve sales or marketing execution. Some consultants focus on demand generation or sales process. Successfulbob is most useful when the product is technical and the company needs help turning product depth into a story buyers, sales teams, partners, and executives can understand and repeat.

FAQ 2

Question

When should a startup use advisory work instead of Production Ready?

Answer

Advisory work is usually better when the company needs guidance, review, coaching, or help making better decisions. Production Ready is better when the company needs the full technical GTM system built and transferred. If you need the roadmap, messaging matrix, demo structure, executive narrative, and partner framework created, that is Production Ready. If you need senior help thinking through what to do next, Advisory may be the better fit.

FAQ 3

Question

Why is there a 3-month minimum?

Answer

Useful advice requires context. I need to understand the product, market, buyer, team, current story, and where the company is trying to go. A single call can be useful, but better advisory work comes from learning enough about the company to give advice that fits the situation instead of generic reactions from the outside.

FAQ 4

Question

Why is advisory capacity limited?

Answer

Advisory work takes focus. I only take on a small number of advisory clients because the advice gets better when I am close enough to understand the company. Limited capacity also protects the value of the relationship for current clients. If I am involved, I want to be involved enough to actually help.

FAQ 5

Question

What is included in Monthly Advisory?

Answer

Monthly Advisory includes a monthly standing call and asynchronous email support. It is designed for companies that want ongoing access to senior technical GTM guidance without a weekly cadence. It can support messaging questions, demo review, partner strategy, executive narrative, product launch thinking, and other strategic GTM topics.

FAQ 6Question

What is included in Weekly Advisory?

Answer

Weekly Advisory includes a weekly standing call and asynchronous email support. It is designed for companies that need closer strategic support, faster feedback, and more frequent access. It is often a better fit around launches, events, partner pushes, enterprise sales motions, executive narrative work, or other moments where the company needs sharper GTM judgment.

FAQ 7Question

Can advisory include board or advisor support?

Answer

Yes. Advisory board support is negotiated based on involvement, company stage, expected scope, and whether the relationship is cash-based, equity-based, or a mix of both. It may make sense when a founder, executive team, or board wants longer-term strategic perspective from Bob without a standard monthly or weekly advisory structure.

FAQ 8Question

Does Advisory Work include content creation?

Answer

No. Advisory Work can include review, coaching, strategy, brainstorming, and guidance around content or messaging, but it is not a content creation package. If the company needs the full GTM system built, that belongs in Production Ready. If the company needs high-volume writing, design, video, campaign execution, or LMS production, that should be handled by internal teams or production resources.
